

Nurse and Spy

Adventures of a Woman in Hospitals, Camps and Battlefields.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS. The author, a native of New Brunswick, but inspired by love of the Union, at the outbreak of the civil war goes to Washand later performs valuable secret work for the Government.

CHAPTER X.

A VICIOUS HORSE-IN A BAD PLIGHT. AIDING THE WOUNDED-THE FAIR OAKS HOSPITAL-MCCLELLAN'S MOVE MENTS.

Gen. H-, who had made himsel conspicuous by his gallant conduct, was struck by a ball, which shattered his arm badly. He was only a few rods from me, and there was none near to help him. I asked Gen. K-- if I might go to him. After obtaining permission I rode up to him, leaped from my horse, and hitched him near by.

I then removed the clothing from his arm, gave him some water, poured some on the wound, and went to my saddlebags to get some bandages, when my rebel pony laid hold of my arm with his teeth and almost tore the flesh from the bone. Not content with that, he turned his heels in an instant and kicked with both feet, sending me about a rod.

My arm was now almost as bad as Gen. H-'s, and I could do but little to help him, for in 10 minutes it was swollen terribly, and I could not raise it to my head. Finally I was ordered back to an old saw-mill about a mile and a half from the field, where were considerable quantities of Quartermaster and Commissary stores, with orders to have them removed further to the rear; and all who were able to come to the front, together with the Surgeon and a portion of the Hospital Corps, who had been left there in charge of the sick, were to lose no time in reporting themselves for duty on the field. Upon arriving at the old saw-mill l found it crowded with wounded men who had crawled there from the battlefield, to have their wounds dressed, if possible, and if not, to lie down and suffer where the shot and shell could not reach them. I delivered my orders. In a few moments more there was not a soul left to minister to those poor fellows who were huddled together in that mill by the score; all

I put my vicious little "Reb" in a build-ing near the mill, where there was plenty of hay and corn, but did not dare to unsaddle him. I then examined the extent of the injury done to my arm, and found it was worse than I had supposed. It was badly mangled by the horse's teeth, and in one place a large piece of flesh was torn from the arm and hung by small shreds. But the arm was not the worst; he had kicked me in the side, which had lamed and bruised me sadly. Yet this was no time to groan over a now in the very agonies of death. So, resolutely saying to pain and lameness, "Stay thou here while I go yonder," I bound up my arm in a sling, and set it most; but having neither knife nor scissors, I was obliged, in many instances, to use my teeth, in order to tear the thick woolen garments, stiffened and saturated with blood, the very remembrance of which now makes me feel rather uncomfortable in the gastric region; but then there was no unpleasant sensation.

The next thing to be thought of was how I could procure some bandages; but as to getting them from the saddle-bags, I would as soon have thought of bearding a lion in his den as of tempting the jaws of that ferocious animal again. However, there were two houses within a mile, and I decided to try my fortune in that exection.

WAITING ON THE WOUNDED.

First of all I went among the sick, who were left there by the Surgeon, and inquired if there were any who were able to assist me in dressing wounds. Yes, I found two; one a little mail-carrier, and the other a Commissary-Sergeant, both of whom were scarcely able to stand alone. These two I set to work pouring cold water upon the wounded limbs occasionally, and giving the men water to drink, until I returned.

At the first house I went to they would not let me in at all, but raised the window and wished to know what was wanted. told them anything that would admit of tearing up for bandages. No, they had nothing of the kind, and closed the win-

I limped along to the next house. A man came to the door, holding it, to prevent my attempting to get in. The same question was asked, and a similiar an-swer returned. By this time my patience and strength were both exhausted, and my mind was made up with regard to the course I should pursue.

Therefore, drawing both my pistols from my belt, I demanded some cotton, new or old—sheets, pillow-cases, or any other article which would answer the purpose for bandages. The man trembled from head to foot, and called his wife to know if the could let me have anything of if she could let me have anything of the sort; yes, she could, if I would pay her for it; and, of course, I was willing to pay her; so she brought me an old sheet, a pair of pillow-cases, and three yards of new factory of the county of the course of the course of the course of the course of the county of the course of the manded $5. Happening to have only $3 in change, I told her I thought that would be sufficient; and so saying, I left im-

I did not know, until I had proceeded some distance, that the blood was running many. from my arm in a perfect stream. In my excitement and determination I had grasped one of my pistols with the lame hand and started those terrible gashes bleeding afresh. I grew faint and dizzy, and sat down by the roadside to gather a little strength before proceeding further.

While I sat there I saw a horseman coming in the distance, but could not tell nearer, when I was rejoiced to see that it hand. But imagine my disappointment and chagrin when he came up and, priest-like, looked upon me, "and passed by on the other side.

Well, after all, I did not care so much for myself, but I thanked heaven that he had come, on the poor men's account, for he would, no doubt, do much during the night to relieve their sufferings.

Taking courage, I made my way slowly

ing every speck of mud from his horse After performing this important duty, he then went to the nearest house, ordered supper, and partaking of a warm meal, returned to the mill.

Oh, how glad I was that all these preliminaries were gone through with, for now he would at once enter upon the care of the wounded and my book the care of the wounded, and my heart ached for those two sick boys, who were still attending to the wants of such as they could assist, notwithstanding they required waiting upon themselves.

BY THE ROADSIDE,

The wounded were coming in faster cotton in strips, and trying to bind up some of the poor mangled limbs, the little sick Sergeant being my righthand man.

I looked around for the Chaplain, but he was nowhere to be seen. I hobbled out to the building where I had seen him put his horse to see if he had really seen him put his horse to see if he had really gone away.

BY S. EMMA E. EDMONDS.

No, he had not gone. There he lay on ington, engages as nurse to the soldiers, I wanted to go to him, quietly lay my hand waiting for the morning light to decide the on him, and say: "Chaplain, will you contest.
be so kind as to take the saddle from my The ex horse; it has been on since early morning, and I am not able to take it off." the saddle removed, but just for sake of of that midnight hour, when silence brood senses, and give him a little shaking up, brave soldiers lay down on that gory so that he might realize that these were field-"the weary to sleep and the woundwartimes, and that consequently it was ed to die." out of the question for Chaplains in the army, especially in time of battle, to

> Be carried to the skies On flowery beds of ease; While others fought to win the prize.

And sailed through bloody seas.

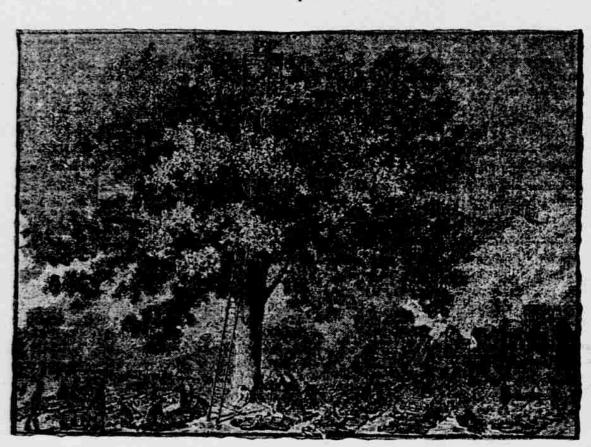

RENEWAL OF THE BATTLE. Night brought a cessation of hostilities disorder. the floor, upon which was a quantity of to the weary troops, but to neither side a the floor, upon which was a quantity of hay, wrapped up in his blanket, apparent-bay, wrapped up in his blanket, apparent-bivouacked on the bloody field, within a bivouacked on the bloody field, within a bivouacked on the bloody field, within a meet him, crush him here, in the very ly unconscious that there was any such bivouacked on the bloody field, within a thing as suffering in the world. Oh, how few rods of each other. There they lay name of a minister of the Gospel.

The excitement and din of battle had ceased; those brief hours of darkness proved a sweet respite from the fierce Not that I cared particularly for having struggle of the day, and in the holy calm having "Reb" bring the Chaplain to his ed over the blood-washed plain, many

Sunday, the 1st of June, dawned beautifully, a day of hallowed rest and prom ise to the millions who rose to their devotions ere the bell called them to the house of prayer; but not of rest to the weary, broken armies the drum beat called from their wet and muddy beds to renew the contest.

But instead of doing so I sat down and wept bitter tears of disappointment and again commenced, and raged fiercely un-had gone to the front, and I was left there sorrow, and then, with a heavy heart til about noon. Both armies fought with and aching limbs, I returned again to the determination and heroic bravery until All that weary night my heart burned victory once more perched upon the ban-with indignation, and I seemed endowed ners of the National troops.

THE HOSPITAL TREE AT FAIR OAKS.

with supernatural powers of endurance, I came on the field about 10 o'clock, and for when morning came and found me remained until the close of the battle, but still at my post, without having tasted food for 24 hours, I felt stronger and fresher than I had done the day before.

A STUMBLING-BLOCK.

The field when I arrived. I saw him ride along the entire battle-front, and if I had My two young sick friends had been mained in ignorance of his presence; persuaded to lie down, and were now fast for the cheers from all parts of the Fedasleep, side by side with the wounded, eral lines told as plainly as words could But where was the Chaplain? What had express that their beloved commander become of him? He had escaped with the was with them amid that desperate strug-Slight kick from a horse, when so many lay around me with shattered limbs and ghastly saber wounds, some of them even who professed to be a faithful followard and the desperate study with the state of lower of Him who went about doing good! that field of carnage. The dead and This was a man whom I had reverenced wounded of the enemy fell into the and loved as a brother in Christ. Oh, hands of the Unionists, which added about removing the blood-clotted cloth-ing from the wounds of those who needed ing from the wounds of those who needed took occasion to make this a severe took occasion. what a stumbling-block that man was to fearfully to the labors of that exhausted, temptation and trial to me.

I heard related from time to time. But, thank God, I had the example of my faith-rise above this temptation.

the rebels were compelled to yield, and not seen him I could not have long re-

McClellan issued the following address to

I was tempted to judge every Christian by that unholy example, and to doubt the truth of every Christian experience which dous cheering:

ADDRESS TO THE ARMY. ful friend, Mr. B—, to counterbalance this, and by God's grace I was enabled to I have fulfilled at least a part of my promise to you. You are now face to face

My doubts were gradually removed, and with the rebels, who are held at bay in my fai h in Christians re-established; but front of their Capital. The final and denever sufficiently recovered from my cisive battle is at hand. Unless you feelings of disgust towards that particu-lar Chaplain to ever again be able to per-be for a moment doubtful. If the troops suade myself to listen to a sermon delivered by him, or to attend any religious meeting at which he presided.

who labored so faithfully at Yorktown, and fought so brawely, and won the hard fights at Williamsburg, West Point, Hanmeeting at which he presided.

I always looked upon him afterwards over Courthouse and Fair Oaks now "one who had stolen the livery of prove themselves worthy of their anteheaven to serve the devil in"; a mere cedents, the victory is surely ours. The whited sepulcher, and unworthy the sacred events of every day prove your superiority; wherever you have met the enemy you have beaten him; wherever you have used the bayonet, he has given way in panic and "I ask of you, now, one last crowning effort. The enemy has staked his all on center of the rebellion. Soldiers, I will be with you in this battle, and share its dangers with you. Our confidence in each other is now founded upon the past. Let us strike the blow which is to restore peace and union to this distracted Upon your valor, discipline, and > of the Potomac, and proved to a demonstration that the enemy far outnumbered the Union forces. Still, there were no reinforcements, notwithstanding McClellan's daily urgent dispatches to the Presi dent and Secretary of War, and the great impending battle in front of the rebel Capital so near at hand.

mutual confidence the result depends."

The next day McClellan sent another dispatch, as follows: "Please inform me at once what reinforcements, if any, I can count upon having at Fortress Monroe or White House within the next three days, and when each regiment may be expected to arrive. It is of the utmost importance that I will amount to 7,000. Regard this as confidential for the present. After the losses in our last battle I trust that I shall no believe we have at least one more desperate battle to fight."

MY BATTLE TROPHY.

The day after the battle of Fair Oaks splendid sword was presented to me. t had been struck from the hand of a rebel Colonel while in the act of raising it to strike one of our officers after he had fallen from his horse. Oh, how proud I felt of that beautiful silver-mounted trophy from the bloody field of Fair Oaks, which had so recently been wielded by a powerful arm, but powerless now, for he lay in the agonies of death, while his s lendid sword had passed into my feeble hands. I presume if he had known this it would have added another pang to his already agonized spirit.

The sword was presented by Gen. K-to whom I gave my rebel pony, with the comforting assurance that he was only intended for ornament, and not for use; or Generals were too scarce on the Peninsula to risk their precious lives by coming in contact with him.

world, while "Reb" stood eveing his new master with apparent satisfaction, and seemed to rejoice that he had passed ist Episcopal Church, soon after the from my insignificant hands, and was outbreak of the great rebellion, delivered henceforth to be the honored bearer of a sermon on the National crisis, at Chishoulder-straps.

General turned his back toward him than he struck him between the shoulders with both hind feet, sending him his full length upon the ground; and as soon as he attempted to rise he repeated the same performance until he had knocked him down four or five times in succession.

Sentiment:

"We will take our glorious flag, the flag of our country, and nail it just below the cross! That is high enough. There let it wave as it waved of old. Around it let us gather; first Christ's; then our country's."

Insisted on fighting. I then said: "Where is your cartridge-box? He patted his pant's pocket and said, "There is my bullets and here is my powder-horn," pulling an old-fashioned powder-horn from his blue swallow-tailed coat pocket, "and I know how to use them."

"We will take our glorious flag, the flag of our country's pant's pocket and said, "There is my bullets and here is my pulling an old-fashioned powder-horn from his blue swallow-tailed coat pocket, "and I know how to use them."

"Well, old man, if you will fash; the same of the same performance until he had knocked him down four or five times in succession." By that time the General was pretty thoroughly convinced that "Reb's" social qualities were somewhat deficient, his

THE HOSPITAL TREE.

On the evening of the same day in which the victory was won I visited what was then and is still called the "Hospital Tree" near Fair Oaks. It was an immense tree, under whose shady, ex-tended branches the wounded were carried and laid down to await the stimulant, the opiate, or the amputating-knife, as the case might require.

with human blood, and the men were laid each one was removed in his turn as the Surgeons could attend to them. I witnessed there some of the most heartmind to conceive. Read what a Massachusetts Chaplain writes concerning it "There is a large tree near the battle ground of Fair Oaks, the top of which was used as an observatory during the fight, which stands as a memento of untold and perhaps never-to-be-told suf fering and sorrow. Many of the wounded Every battle fought on the Peninsula fearfully reduced the strength of the Army of the Battle, in order to receive Surgiafter the battle, in order to receive Surgi-cal help, or to breathe their last more quietly.

> ness in that place, so full of saddened memories to me and to others. Brave, uncomplaining men were brought thither out of the woodland, the crimson tide of of those who carried them. Almost all tions! Two instances of this heroic fortitude deserve to be specially mentioned One of them is that of William C. Bentand breast were mangled, and who yet was as calm as if he suffered no pain.

The General was delighted with him, and, without paying the slightest attention to my suggestion, deliberately walked up to the pony and commenced patting him and handling his limbs as if he were the most quiet creature in the forever with the Lord!

cago. It is represented as one of the After thoroughly examining him, he said: "He is certainly a splendid horse, and worth $300 of any man's money; all he requires is kind treatment, and he denomination, thousands were present to the denomination.

fighting before Richmond and the change of cartridge-belt, and he declined to wear base will be given in the next installment. the belt, but filled his pockets with ambump of combativeness largely devel-oped, and his gymnastics quite im- The author's part in the episodes of that time munition. At this time nothing but skirwas most interesting.

The ground around that tree for several acres in extent was literally drenched so close together that there was no such thing as passing between them; but rending sights it is possible for the human

"What heartrending scenes did I wit whose life was ebbing away in the arms who died met death like heroes, with scarcely a groan. Those wounded, but not mortally-how nobly they bore the necessary probings and needed amputashould know this immediately. The ley, of the 2d R. I., both of whose legs were broken by a bombshell, whose wrist He refused any opiate or stimulant that onger be regarded as an alarmist. I might dim his consciousness. He asked only that we should pray for him, that he might be patient and submissive, and dictated a letter to be sent to his mother. did during the first day's fighting—July 1, dictated a letter to be sent to his mother. Then, and not till then, opiates were given him, and he fell gently asleep, and for the last time.

"The other case was that of Francis Sweetzer, of Co. E of the 16th Mass., who witnessed in death, as he had uniarms and the fierce surge of battle is prepared to go from that scene of blood and strife, and to enter into that rest that God has prepared for them that love Him? Yes, the noble men who have gone from under the sheltering wings of the different evangelical churches throughout the

GREELEY.

1862 - 1865.

VOL.II.

THE MAN WHO LIVED.

He should have been dead. But he wasn't, because-

"There's nothing succeeds like success." sing the formula for such a very valuable.

There is no withstanding the living argument of the man who should be dead, who Ohio Farmer, Cleveland, Ohio. isn't dead, but who would be dead, but for a preserving medicine. That's about the way it seemed to strike Editor Lawrence, of the Ohio Farmer, Cleveland, Ohio. He was afflicted with one of those colds that have, thousands of times over, culminated in consumption, when not promptly cured. In this condition he met a friend, a con-my desk all the time. This is certainly the best remedy for a cold I ever used. It gives almost instant relief, and the J. C. Ayer Co., Ayer Co. are to be congratulated on posses- Lowell, Mass.

Keep a bottle of Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral handy, on the desk, in the office, on the shelf or in the closet at home, and you will have at hand a remedy that is capable at any time of saving you suffering, money, and even life. There is no malady so prolific of evil results as a neglected cold. There is no medicine so promptly effective in curing a cold and absolutely eradicating In this condition he met a sumptive, whom he had not expected to see alive. The consumptive friend recommended Dr. J. C. Aver's Cherry Pectoral for the editor's cold, on the ground that it had "helped him wonderfully." It helped the editor just as wonderfully, giving "almost instant relief." But read his letter:

There is no medicine so proceed in curing a cold and absolutely eradicating its effects, as Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Every traveller should carry it. Every household should keep it. It cures every variety of cough, and all forms of lung and throat trouble. Asthma, bronchitis, croup, and whooping cough, are promptly cured by it, and it has in many cases overwith a bad cold, and, meeting a friend, he advised the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which, he claimed, had helped him won-help and physicians gave no hope of cure. derfully. As he was a consumptive, whom | Those who for convenience have wanted a I had not expected to see alive for several smaller sized bottle of Dr. Ayer's Cherry years, I concluded there must be merit in this preparation. I accordingly bought a couple of bottles, one of which I keep on Send for Dr. Ayer's Curebook, and read

JOHN BURNS OF GETTYSBURG.

The True Story of the Old Citizen Hero, as Told by Gen. Callis.

left. We fought our way out as best we Last Spring, Doc Aubrey, of Milwaukee. wrote to Gen. J. B. Callis, of Lancaster Wis., who died recently, concerning Old 1863. Gen. Callis, gallant old veteran that he was, and who was shot through the body on that day, responded. Both letters will be of interest. We give them:

Milwaukee, April 8. Dear General: In a conversation with formly done in life, a good confession of one of the old boys lately we drifted to Christ. 'Thank God,' he said, 'that I am the Gettysburg fight, and John Burns's permitted to die for my country. Thank name was mentioned. Now, my dear God, more yet, that I am prepared to die.' General, will you write me what you And then, after a moment's thought, he know of John Burns of Gettysburg? This And then, after a moment's thought, he know of John Burns of Gettysburg? This modestly added: 'At least, I hope I am.' old boy I speak of was not the d—I, as When he died he was in the act of prayer." Gibbon said, but one of the Sixth Corps Oh, who that has witnessed such tri- boys who claimed he fought with them umphant deaths on the battlefield will He says he fell in with the Iron Brigade. presume to doubt that the spirit of that We have left it to you to decide. Hoping patriot who falls amid the terrible clash of to hear from you soon, I am, yours truly,

Doc Aubrey, The Quondam Newsboy. 723 Van Buren street, Milwaukee.

Lancaster, April 14, 1885. Doc Aubrey.-My Dear Comrade: I received your note of inquiry some days land, have gone in the strength of God, ago, but the changeable weather of this and with the full assurance that if they Winter has so disturbed me that I have tured Gen. Archer's Brigade, in the first Good Bishop Simpson, of the Method-ist Episcopal Church, soon after the The old man came up and asked me if that was my regiment. I answered "Yes. He had an old flintlock gun in his hands, and came to a present arms and

"Can I fight in your regiment?"
I replied: "Old man, you had better go will be as gentle as anyone ould desire."

But "Reb" very soon gave him to understand decidedly that he was overrating his good qualities, for no sooner had the General turned his back toward him.

"Well, old man, if you will fight, take this gun," handing him a nice silver-mounted rifle that we had captured with EDITORIAL NOTE.-Stirring events of the some of Archer's men. I gave him the mishing was going on in our front, and he got restless, went toward the skirmish. line and to it, and fought nobly until I called the skirmishers in and made preparations to get out of that little end of a V, as we were flanked on the right and could, and in this move John Burns was wounded three times, and I lost sight of him and was shot myself, and John Burns and I were left on the battlefield, badly wounded, where I lay 43 hours. Burns told me afterward his friends took him off home after the rebels had advanced over him and through the town. J. B. Callis.

OLD JOHN BURNS.

Catarrh in the head is a very disagreeble complaint. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla and be cured

The National Tribnne,

It is very easy now To raise a club for

Set of Books for $1.

THE

CONFLICT

GREELEY.

This unexampled bargain is strictly limited to Subscribers of THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE and those who become such.

The purpose of this great sale is to make it well worth while to be a subscriber to THE TRIBUNE and to induce new subscriptions,

->-THE-American Conflict

Practically a Complete Country as well a Great Rebellion.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

Large 8vo.; Two Volumes; 1,430 pages; 144 Steel Portraits and 80 Views, Maps and Plans of Battles.

We have secured the sole right to issue a popular edition of this immortal work. The lowest price of any previous edition has been $9. This placed it beyond the reach of

THE SCOPE OF THE WORK.

Rising from the humbler walks of life, Horace Greeley for more than 50 years, by the force of his intellect, led popular thought in this country. While still in the prime of his whether it was friend or foe, for it was growing dark. I waited until he came powers he was enabled to look back over the most stormy a Chaplain; not Mr. B—, but, of course, he was a good man, being a Chaplain and a Federal. So I felt that relief was at observation and experience has left this priceless contributions. tion to the annals of the Nation. This history is without a peer in our literature.

Mr. Greeley's history is not only the most faithful and fascinating chronicle of the War of the Rebellion extant, toward the mill, where I found, on my arrival, the Chaplain, dismounted, coat but it embraces likewise a complete history of the country, and will outwear ordinary cloth, and will permanently off, and wisp in hand, rubbing and brush- tracing its growth from the beginning, through all its polit- retain its beauty and finish. ical vicissitudes, up to the firing upon Fort Sumter, which heralded the opening of the most desperate struggle of actly as in the high-priced editions, word for word.

history of our country.

Our edition is handsomely printed on good paper in than ever, and I was busy tearing up the two volumes, securely bound in leatherette for preservation

Address

The original text is complete and unabridged, ex- conversation, should fail to read and study these volumes.

The original illustrations, maps and plans of battle-No one who has not read Mr. Greeley's book can fields are reproduced exactly. There are 144 portraits on TIONAL TRIBUNE. They will be sent, postpaid, to any subclaim to have acquired a thorough knowledge of the steel, and 80 other illustrations, including maps and plans of scriber now on our books who sends $1. battlefields.

This is one of the very few historical works that is as and the other $1 pays for the books. fascinating as a novel. The young who read it will cultivate The leatherette binding we use is of a superior quality, a taste for good books.

No American who desires to talk intelligently of the history of his country, either as a public speaker or in private

HOW TO SECURE THE VOLUMES.

We sell these volumes only to subscribers of THE NA-

Those who are not subscribers should send $2. One As a Christmas Gift these volumes are most acceptable. dollar of this is to pay for a year's subscription to the paper

We reserve the right of increasing the price or withdrawing this offer at any time. Send in your order at once.

THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE. 339 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.